

Digging Into Developmental Relationships

Relationships are too important to leave to chance. Educational success and social-emotional development blossom when caring adults and supportive peers are present in young people's lives.

Who Should Attend

- Educators & Leaders
- Staff and Leadership from family-serving organizations
- Staff & Leadership from Youth Serving Organizations
- Members of collective impact partnerships and other community coalitions
- Parents
- Community Members

What You'll Learn at this workshop:

- Reflect on the things you currently do—and can start to do—to build strong relationships with young people
- Review findings from studies at Search Institute and elsewhere that demonstrate the connections between strong relationships and strong youth outcomes
- Consider and discuss the ways that developmental relationships help young people learn to strive to be their best
- Analyze the five core components of Search Institute's Developmental Relationships Framework and identify ways to integrate the concepts into their ongoing work with young people
